

Attention was directed to the FCC's proposed consideration that would limit Indiana's Telephone Privacy protections. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law is one government program that has shown benefits not only to my homelife, but to those friends and family who have joined the program. Interruption or castration of Indiana's law by the FCC would run contra to an inherent liberty of peace & quiet after a hard day's work. I beg the FCC's consideration that Indiana's Telephone Privacy law is beneficial to all who have chosen to request its protection. The incorporation of limits upon this law would be not only harmful but against the government's desire to serve the common man.
